The Short Answer

VEs are VELoop Rewards' in-platform reward currency — the unit you earn when you complete activities like watching ads, finishing tasks, playing games, or logging in for your daily streak. Think of VEs the way you'd think of points in a loyalty program: not cash themselves, but value you've earned that can move toward a real payout through the Exchange Center and Wallet.

VELoop also uses SVEs, a related but distinct currency typically tied to bonus or special-event earning.

How You Actually Earn VEs on VELoop

- Watching ads through Watch Ads & Earn
- Completing listed Tasks
- Playing eligible Games
- Maintaining your Daily Streak
- Successful Refer & Earn referrals
- Certain Spin & Win and Giveaway outcomes

Exactly how many VEs each activity is worth can vary by offer and region, since these figures are set at the task/offer level. Check that task's own listing inside the app for current numbers.

Turning VEs Into Something You Can Withdraw

- 1 Earn VEs through any of the activities above.
- 2 Check your balance in your account.
- 3 Move VEs through the Exchange Center, converting them toward withdrawable value.
- 4 Withdraw through the Wallet, using an available method such as PayPal or Paytm.

A Quick Note on Accuracy

This guide explains the mechanism of VEs without inventing specific conversion rates. Treat your in-app balance and the Exchange Center screen as the source of truth.

5 FAQ

Do VEs expire?

Check your account terms directly, as expiry policies (if any) may be updated over time.

What's the difference between VEs and SVEs?

VEs are earned through everyday activities; SVEs are typically tied to bonus or special-event earning.

Can I earn VEs without watching ads?

Yes — Tasks, Games, Daily Streak, and Refer & Earn are all separate ways to earn VEs.

Where do I see my current VE balance?

Your VE balance is shown in your account dashboard and updates as you complete eligible activities.
